Comments:

I'm sure many of my sentiments have been expressed by others, but I would like to add just a couple more. When public wild lands are lost to any kind of modern development it is very hard to ever replace it to it's wild natural state. These developments are now becoming mournful and depreciating events rather than prideful victories. Learning how to live without consuming or occupying every space or resource around us should be our next level of growth and development.
